JULIAN FACES MURDER CHARGE ON SATURDAY

Two Secret True Bills Among Indictments Of Recalled January Jury

Indicted on a first degree murder charge in the slaying of his ex-wife, Harvey Barton Julian, 26, former Circleville dairy worker, is scheduled for arraignment at 10 a. m. Saturday before Judge William D. Radcliff in the Pickaway county common pleas court.

Concluding a one-day session the reconvened grand jury adjourned late Tuesday afternoon. However, the jury's report was not filed in the office of Clerk of Courts Arthur L. Wilder until Wednesday morning.

The jury returned eight open and two secret indictments, ignoring one case, and examined 18 witnesses, the report says.

Judge Radcliff announced that arraignment of those indicted will take place Saturday morning.

The indictment against Julian says: "Harvey Julian on the 21st day of January, 1947, at the county of Pickaway, did unlawfully, purposely, and of deliberate and premeditated malice, kill Eileen Brown Julian".

Following his surrender to Sheriff Charles Radcliff less than four hours after the killing, which occurred on the isolated Hitler-Ludwig road, three miles east of Circleville, Julian confessed to the sheriff and Prosecutor Kenneth Robbins that he had bludgeoned and shot to death Pearl Eileen Julian who three weeks previously had obtained a divorce from him. In the confession, which Julian later signed, he admitted that he had planned to kill Pearl Eileen in the event she refused his offer of a reconciliation and his demand that she re-marry him.

Farmer Indicted

Perry Stout, 53, Scioto township farmer who allegedly shot and killed three hunting dogs valued at $625, was indicted on two counts of malicious destruction of property. The indictment charges that on Jan. 15 Stout killed a female sound valued at $200 and owned by Ray Ames, and two female hounds valued at $200 and $225 and owned by Edward Hudson. The charges have been filed against Stout by Ames and Hudson, both of Commercial Point, who told Deputy Sheriff Vern L. Pontious they were hunting coon shortly before midnight, that the dogs

Truman Studies Action To Prevent Removal Of Government Records

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 — The White House announced today that President Truman is considering action to safeguard government papers and records from withdrawal by diary-keeping officials when they leave office.

The President's step was prompted by revelation that former Treasury Secretary Morgenthau had removed voluminous "notes" on the Roosevelt administration following his resignation from the cabinet.

White House Secretary Charles G. Ross said the President "feels very strongly" that such records and papers are government property and that no official has a right to remove them or use them for private purposes.

One course of action open to Mr. Truman, it was pointed out, would be a request to Congress for legislation prohibiting any official from removing papers from government files.

Ross said, however, that the President has not decided whether he will press for such legislation.

Ross added that the chief executive feels there has been "widespread abuse" by some public officials of their opportunities to become privy to confidential information.

With Treasury Secretary Snyder demanding that Morgenthau return to the treasury some 800 volumes of his alleged 900-volume diary, former Interior Secretary Ickes also was injected into the picture.

Ickes, noting that he had been accused by an "unidentified source" of removing 50 filled filing cabinets when he left office, tartly asserted:

Ohio Solons Urged To Reduce Majority Needed To Pass School Levies

Circleville and Pickaway county school officials were watching with interest Wednesday efforts to get the Ohio legislature to reduce from 65 per cent to bare majority the margin necessary to pass special tax levies.

Last Spring a majority of the citizens of Circleville voted for a special levy to finance proposed new facilities for the city's schools but the levy failed because the necessary 65 per cent majority was not obtained. In November a Saltcreek township program also failed on the same basis.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—The house labor committee announced today hearings will begin Feb. 5 on omnibus labor reform legislation designed to meet the possibility of a renewed soft coal strike on March 31, and other threatened labor difficulties.

Announcement of the labor committee's action was made by Chairman Hartley (R) N. J., who said that the committee aimed to bring its proposed law to the house floor by mid-March.

Asked if that date was chosen because of the March 31 deadline set by John L. Lewis for the soft coal truce, Hartley replied that it was his "personal" opinion that it was.

Relying to a further question, Hartley asserted that he "hoped" that the proposed legislation would have the effect of avoiding a renewed soft coal walk-out.

Speaking frankly, the house labor committee chairman asserted that a presidential veto of labor reform legislation was "more a possibility" than it was last year when Mr. Truman vetoed the Case anti-strike bill.

Hartley added, however, "I feel quite confident that the labor committee can draft a bill that will give us enough votes in the house to pass it over a veto."

He told a news conference that the committee would take testimony "with respect to a creation of administrative agencies or boards intended to protect the public interest by settling labor disputes and preventing disastrous strikes."

The chairman said that the committee would consider all proposed legislation to amend or repeal the national labor relations act, including proposals similar to those introduced in the Senate by Sen. Ball (R) Minn., dealing with the

CLUB GIVES UP LIQUOR PERMIT; PROBE GOES ON

CLEVELAND, Jan. 29—Attorney General Hugh S. Jenkins' investigation of liquor licenses issued during the waning days of the Lausche administration resulted today in the voluntary surrender of a permit by at least one club.

The attorney general revealed late yesterday that a Cleveland establishment on West 25th street, known as the Antlers Social club, had sent its license back to the state liquor department and asked for a refund.

Jenkins said that the club secretary informed investigating state highway patrolmen of the action and he verified it by telephone.

The attorney general added that another club reported it also had surrendered its permit but that the liquor department had not received it yesterday.

Jenkins was to extend his personal supervision of the investigation by joining a team working in the Canton area. Another team has been operating in the Warren-Youngstown district and still another in the Akron area.

Official reports on the probe will be held up, the attorney general said, until comparisons can be made with records on file in the secretary of state's office in Columbus.

Kraukauer is known as a big-time bookmaker, police said, and has a record of eight arrests. He left a Bronx hospital after Paris started talking before a grand jury that returned indictments against Kraukauer, Harvey Stemmer and Jerry Zarowitz on charges of conspiracy and bribery.

Kraukauer, Stemmer and Zarowitz were indicted on the same charge under which Paris was convicted of offering a bribe to Merle Hapes and Frank Filchock to "throw" the Giants-Bears championship game.

Voorhees, who gave his address at the home of his brother, Dean, in Van Nuys phoned police late last night and Detective Ed Barrett took the call.

"I want to talk about the 'Black Dahlia' case," he said.

"I am sick," he added. "I can't stand it any longer. I am the one you want. I killed Beth Short."

"I want to give myself up. I will meet you on the northeast corner of Fourth and Hill streets."

Barrett, accompanied by Detectives A. A. Shambra and E. A. Brashear, drove to the appointed location and took him into custody.

He was bare-headed and appeared "bewildered and befuddled," according to the officers.

"The United States government has decided to terminate its connections with the committee of three which was established in Chungking for the purpose of terminating hostilities in China and of which Gen. Marshall was chairman."

The United States government also has decided to terminate its connections with executive headquarters which was established in Peiping by the committee of three for the purpose of supervising, in the field, the execution of the agreement for the cessation of hostilities and the demobilization and reorganization of the armed forces in China.

The American personnel involved in executive headquarters will be withdrawn as soon as possible."

HOUSE STARTS FEB. 5 TO STUDY LAW REFORMS

At the conclusion of hearings, Hartley said, the committee will draft an omnibus bill covering all desired labor reforms and would bring it to the floor under his name.

He said that the committee will give consideration to:

"Various proposals for a 'cooling-off' period before strikes or lockouts; whether a strike vote shall be required as a condition precedent before, after, or during the conciliation and mediation process; whether distinctions should be made between the handling of ordinary labor disputes and those which endanger the public health, safety and national welfare; whether arbitration should be voluntary in all cases or compulsory in some; whether the arbitration awards should be binding; how should arbitrators be chosen and by whom; and should such facilities be available for all disputes after other efforts at settlement have failed, or in only certain classes where the public health and interest are paramount, and finally who shall decide that enforced arbitration is necessary."

At the conclusion of labor hearings, Hartley said his committee may consider the portal-to-portal pay legislation proposals which would amend the fair labor standards act.

He said, that for the time being, the house Republican leadership has decided to attack the portal-to-portal pay problem through limitations of jurisdiction in federal courts, and that hearings on these methods will be held by the house judiciary committee.

The national electrical manufacturing association urged congress today to outlaw labor's use of the secondary boycott in order to open major markets and release its industry from the "fear" of bankruptcy.

The pleas was given the senate labor committee by R. Stafford Edwards, of New Canaan, Conn., president of the association of 498 electrical manufacturers.

Edwards said that for 12 years many manufacturers have been "excluded" from metropolitan markets, or admitted to them "on terms imposed" by the international brotherhood of electrical workers.

His testimony followed that of Theodore R. Iserman, New York labor attorney, who declared that pending labor bills "go to the roots of our troubles" and should be passed immediately. Iserman said they provided changes which even unions know are "inevitable."

Edwards told the committee that the Benjamin Electric Manufacturing company of Des Plaines, Ill., was forced by the IBEW to have fixtures produced outside its CI plant at increased costs of as much as 500 per cent.

Later, he said, the union tightened up and the company is being forced to cancel "hundreds of thousands of dollars of orders."

The quartet was charged with a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum fine of $200, or three months in jail, or both. Unable to pay the fine, Miss Mamie M. Fowler, 30, rear of 364 Town street, and Mrs. Elizabeth Shaffer, 18, housewife, Route 2, Circleville, were committed to the Pickaway county jail. ESTIMATES VARY ON COSTS OF SOLDIER BONUS

Schorr Says Home Owners Will Pay $9 A Year For 25 Years

By ROBERT VINCENT
INS Staff Correspondent

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 29—Every Ohio owner of a $5,000 home may be required to pay $9 a year additional taxes for the next quarter-century to finance a soldier bonus.

That estimate was given the senate military affairs committee today by former Republican state chairman Ed D. Schorr, now spokesman for the legislative committee of the Ohio American Legion.

The Legion backed one of three proposals for a soldier bonus being considered by the military affairs committee, while the Veterans of Foreign Wars backed a different proposal and the Disabled American Veterans supported the third.

All three of the measures are in resolution form, which requires three-fifths passage by both house and senate to place the bonus question before Ohio voters in November. The Legion proposal would call for 25-year bonds to be retired from a real estate levy outside the ten-mill limitation.

The VFW resolution would retire the bonds from sales tax revenues, while the DAV proposal would combine the two retirement plans.

Schorr, who was serving as an advisor without pay as a member of the Legion—he is a World War I veteran—estimated the cost of the bonus at 400 million dollars if a bonus were based on payment of $10 for each month's domestic service and $15 for each month's foreign service between Pearl Harbor and V-J day.

He said that a real estate levy would be necessary so that the bonds would have the full credit of the state behind them. He estimated the state's real property tax duplicate at 11 billion dollars, and that the levy over the 25-year period would range from 2.18 mills to start down to 1.4 mills at the end, with the average being 1.83 mills.

Thus a home appraised at $5,000 would be taxed an average of $9.15 additional for bonus purposes, or a total of $225 over the quarter-century life span of the two per cent bonds.

"Soldiers will find that they themselves will pay a substantial part of the bill," Schorr stated. "There is no escaping that."

Schorr suggested that the load might be lightened if the legislature would appropriate part of the present huge treasury surplus to the constitutional 'sinking fund commissioners'—the state auditor, the secretary of state and the attorney general.

"This is a definite postwar need," Schorr continued. "The general assembly could appropriate this 90 million dollars and provide the first funds to meet part of the 400-million-dollar costs."

There was a wide difference in the estimates as to the cost of the bonus. The Legion placed the cost at 400 million; the VFW at 325 million, and the DAV at 500 million. The state veterans program commission, in its brand-new report, estimated that there are about one million veterans which would make the cost range from 100 millions for a flat $100 bonus to 375 millions on a $10-domestic-$15-foreign-service basis.

The commission, incidentally, shied away from a flat bonus recommendation, leaving the matter entirely up to the legislature.

It did point out that "consideration should be given to the point of view that an immediate cash bonus is quickly dissipated and consequently is of no enduring value."

"It is believed by many," the report continued, "that in an expenditure involving the respectable amount of some 500 million dollars, more far-reaching benefits should accrue to the veteran and to the state of Ohio."

The commission then suggested study of a tax exemption for veterans; a loan fund for veterans, a veterans' assistance fund, farm or home loans, or a bonus for specific purposes under specified conditions.

In appearances before the senate committee, Willis O. Hall, legislative chairman for the VFW, challenged Schorr's statement that a real estate levy was necessary, and indicated that such a levy might be a "kiss of death" to the bonus program.

"The only thing we are afraid of is putting a tax on real estate," he stated. "We are of the opinion that

"This is a definite postwar need," Schorr continued. "The general assembly could appropriate this 90 million dollars and provide the first funds to meet part of the 400-million-dollar costs."

There was a wide difference in the estimates as to the cost of the bonus. The Legion placed the cost at 400 million; the VFW at 325 million, and the DAV at 500 million.

The state veterans program commission, in its brand-new report, estimated that there are about one million veterans which would make the cost range from 100 millions for a flat $100 bonus to 375 millions on a $10-domestic-$15-foreign service basis.

The commission, incidentally, shied away from a flat bonus recommendation, leaving the matter entirely up to the legislature.

It did point out that "consideration should be given to the point of view that an immediate cash bonus is quickly dissipated and consequently is of no enduring value."

"It is believed by many," the report continued, "that in an expenditure involving the respectable amount of some 500 million dollars, more far-reaching benefits should accrue to the veteran and to the state of Ohio."

The commission then suggested study of a tax exemption for veterans; a loan fund for veterans, a veterans' assistance fund, farm or home loans, or a bonus for specific purposes under specified conditions.

In appearances before the senate committee, Willis O. Hall, legislative chairman for the VFW, challenged Schorr's statement that a real estate levy was necessary, and indicated that such a levy might be a "kiss of death" to the bonus program.

"The only thing we are afraid of is putting a tax on real estate," he stated. "We are of the opinion that the voters would not approve a bonus if it required such a tax."

Hall contended that the bonds could be retired out of sales tax revenues.

However, David M. Brown, legislative chairman for the DAV, agreed with Schorr that a real estate levy would be necessary to pledge the faith and credit of the state and make the bonds salable. He compromised, however, by urging that "if there is any way you can use surplus funds, for goodness sake, use them."

FERTILIZER IS STILL SCARCE, FARMERS TOLD

Agronomist Suggests Early Orders To Assure Filling Needs

Due largely to strikes and railway car shortages, the supply of fertilizers for the Spring season promises to be no greater than last year. Nitrogen will be harder to get than in 1946, prophesies E. E. Barnes, agronomist at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

Prices have not been announced, as yet, but it is a fair assumption that they will be somewhat higher.

It seems probable that fertilizers containing 12 percent potash will be scarce, and that the 2-12-6 will be the most plentiful complete fertilizer.

Even though fertilizers appear scarce, this is because of increased demand and not to decreased supply as compared to previous years. Farmers are using about double the amount of fertilizer they used in the 1935-39 period.

In view of the prospects, Dr. Barnes makes the following suggestions:

Determine your needs early, put in your order and accept delivery whenever offered. Use all of your phosphate bearing fertilizer for corn in the hill or row. Broadcast phosphate bearing fertilizers only on pastures and small grains, especially on small grains in which the crop is being seeded.

If you are lucky enough to get some nitrogenous fertilizer, this can be used to best advantage on fruit trees, to plow under with grass seeds for corn, and possibly to topdress wheat about April 1.

However, it is too early to make a prediction of how well wheat will respond to such a treatment. It will depend on the weather during the next three months. An open Winter with much rain, or, in other words, a Winter in which the tiles run several times will lower the level of available nitrogen in the soil to a point where nitrogen topdressing of wheat is highly profitable. Spring applications of nitrogen on grass meadows is another place where this element can be used with profit.

THE NEXT GAS SHORTAGE COULD EVEN BE MORE SERIOUS

Last week's severe cold weather caused a temporary Gas Emergency.

We have advocated gas conservation by all of our customers since last fall. The situation was critical. Ten degree weather and a temporary restriction in the Big Inch supply forced us to draw heavily on our local reserve supply of gas in Ohio fields. The present supply is low as a result of this, with no chance of being built up until summer.

A few small communities were seriously affected. In other communities, some customers experienced inadequate pressures.

To help avert another serious shortage we must ask you to continue conservation. Conversion to gas from other fuels for house heating cannot be made. Reliable heating contractors and dealers have cooperated almost without exception this winter, by discontinuing the sale of gas-fired heating equipment where other methods are in use. We must emphasize that this policy be practiced at least through the winter.

We thank you for your cooperation during the past emergency. Without your help the situation would have been much more serious. We request your continued cooperation. Conservation by you means that you help avert disrupted service to yourself and your neighbors. It means that industry does not have to be turned off as soon or stay off as long as it would, if you failed to cooperate.

Remember — conserve gas in the following ways. Lower your thermostat to 65° at bedtime. Close off unused rooms and shut bedroom doors at night. Avoid using your gas range for extra heat. Rely on your usual fuel for house heating.

THE NEXT GAS SHORTAGE COULD EVEN BE MORE SERIOUS

Last week's severe cold weather caused a temporary Gas Emergency. We have advocated gas conservation by all of our customers since last fall. The situation was critical. Ten degree weather and a temporary restriction in the Big Inch supply forced us to draw heavily on our local reserve supply of gas in Ohio fields. The present supply is low as a result of this, with no chance of being built up until summer.

A few small communities were seriously affected. In other communities, some customers experienced inadequate pressures.

To help avert another serious shortage we must ask you to continue conservation. Conversion to gas from other fuels for house heating cannot be made. Reliable heating contractors and dealers have cooperated almost without exception this winter, by discontinuing the sale of gas-fired heating equipment where other methods are in use. We must emphasize that this policy be practiced at least through the winter.

We thank you for your cooperation during the past emergency. Without your help the situation would have been much more serious. We request your continued cooperation. Conservation by you means that you help avert disrupted service to yourself and your neighbors. It means that industry does not have to be turned off as soon or stay off as long as it would, if you failed to cooperate.

Remember — conserve gas in the following ways. Lower your thermostat to 65° at bedtime. Close off unused rooms and shut bedroom doors at night. Avoid using your gas range for extra heat. Rely on your usual fuel for house heating.

FOREIGN TRADE

THE State Department wants national backing for the 18-nation International Trade Organization meeting in Geneva in April. Initiated by the United States, this was to realize the Hull reciprocal trade idea.

Opposition has developed among business leaders and some Congressmen. They say that while other nations for years have used expert practical business advisers in international dealings, American government officials have made decisions regardless of cost or of commercial considerations, excluding business leaders who must carry out the terms. They believe that though unrestricted free trade may be ideal, it is impossible against present nation-controlled practices such as the English labor government's empire preferences, Communism in Russia and its satellites, cooperatives in Sweden, and similar conditions elsewhere. The object to attempted competition with countries subsidized by the United States in loans, debt concessions and commodity advances.

Some way must be found to safeguard domestic economy and at the same time to work for free world markets. Cooperation between government and business is called for.

THE COLLEGE MILL

D. R. Charles Woolsey Cole, president of Amherst College, seems to think there is too much cramming and jamming in college education. Speaking to an alumni group, he says:

"We seem to be trying to process students instead of trying to educate them. It is possible to educate men and make them broad by mass methods."

This is doubtless true, especially at the present time when the colleges seem to be flooded with more students than they can handle. Real education was never intended for rapid mass production. Yet the masses rush in. Many of them just want football, but most of them probably want real education; and how they are going to get their share of it in the general scramble is a serious problem.

POLITICAL IMMORALITY

A constitutional amendment limiting future presidents to two terms is proposed by some congressmen. Are they admirers of President Roosevelt, seeking to make his memory immortal? If the amendment passes, FDR will go down in history as serving longer than any other president in the history of the nation. Historians will be bound to note this about him, regardless of what they record about the events of his administrations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—It's funny, the stories you sometimes hear, just drifting around out on capitol hill, listening to the conversations...

In the congressman's office, there were a couple of guys from out of town. Wandering in their state a few months ago, I'd met them and spent some time with them. After we'd said hello, one of them took me to one side.

"Where you going from here?" asked.

"Over to the other side of the hill."

"Wait a little while. We want to talk to you outside."

Wondering what was coming, I waited. Outside, it wasn't long before they got to the point.

"How much money does what's his-name in there make?" They wanted to know, mentioning the congressman's executive assistant.

I told them that, as I understood it, the job paid somewhere in the neighborhood of $10,000 a year, all things considered.

"What did I tell ya?" said one of them. The other one whistled. Then they both laughed uproariously for a moment.

"Lemme tell you about that guy," the first one finally said. "If there's a useless punk in our town he's it. Got kicked outa high school a time or two, then just loafed around town after that. You could always find him in the pool hall or bar most any day.

"Far as I know, he never had a job for more than a couple or three months in his life. Don't know whether he could hold one if he tried—and he never tried. Wouldn't work."

"Ten thousand dollars!" exploded the other one. "Why that jerk never made two thousand dollars any year he lived!"

"That's right," the first one grinned. For a moment we walked along in silence. Then I suggested that perhaps the guy had been a pretty good worker for the congressman's party, back home.

They shook their heads in emphatic unison.

"Now," the spokesman said. "He couldn't get the congressman a dozen votes right in his own neighborhood. All he ever did was sort of hang around during campaign and election time, and run errands for them. Sometimes he drove one of the campaign cars, or something like that. Naw, he's just a punk."

"As a matter of fact," said the other one, "as soon as it gets out back home that he's got a $10,000 government job, the congressman is going to start getting squeaks by the basketful!"

I haven't been back into the congressman's office since then, but something tells me he's going to have a new assistant...

Between the house office building and the capitol building, you can walk through the subway if it's inclement weather outside. Between the capitol building and the senate office building, you can walk through another subway or, if you wish, ride in one of the two little trolleys which shuttle back and forth.

A couple of new congressmen were being taken on the rounds of capitol hill by one of their secretaries who was more or less a veteran out there.

Waiting for the subway car there, they seemed engaged in a serious argument. One was waving his arms and gesturing.

You never can tell when such an argument may give you a lead into some new legislation being planned, so I moved over

WASHINGTON—The new ambassador to Great Britain, O. Max Gardner, sails from New York aboard the liner America Feb. 6 to take over his London post.

Gardner and his wife have been feted at diplomatic parties in Washington for the past two weeks. Asked by an inquisitive newsman how he stood up under this round of social gaiety, Gardner replied:

"I lived a virtuous life as a young man and am now calling on my reserves. But I have the trick for leaving early."

"You know it is protocol at these diplomatic parties for all guests to stay until the highest ranking guest departs. At each party, I look up the highest ranking guest about 11 o'clock and show him a shiny new dollar."

"I tell him that this dollar is pure and virtuous and that I will give it to him if he will get right up at that moment and start home. Invariably, the guest takes the dollar and departs. Then I can go home early, too."

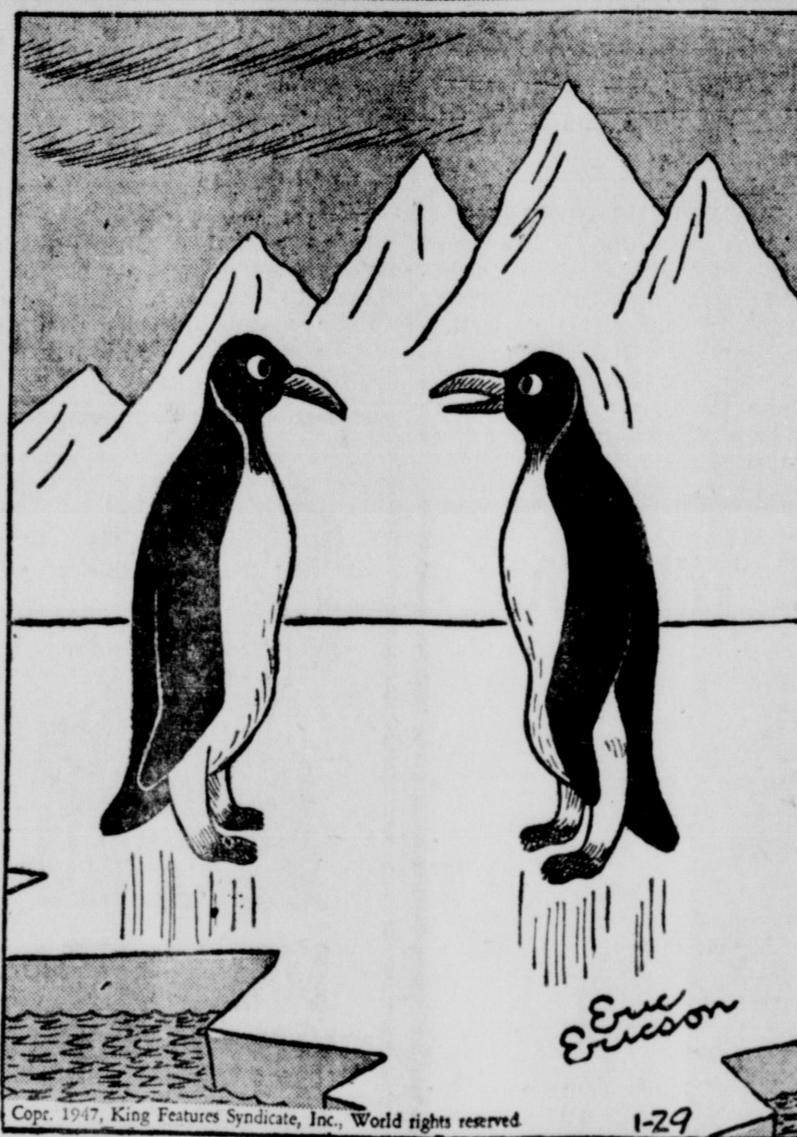

SENATORS' STENOGRAPHERS have long had the habit of helping their bosses "dress up" their floor speeches before copies go to the printers of the Congressional Record.

This happened the other day after Senator Hayden (D) of Arizona remarked that President Truman, during his Senate service, was a "common or garden variety" of legislator.

you've been keeping hair of them up your sleeve. So before we talk about a job for you, let's see what happens tomorrow. Right now your only job is to help me get started."

He saw the anger welling up again—they couldn't get along. She answered evenly, "The trouble with you is you just don't like women."

He gave a short laugh. "I can do without the executive type, if that's what you mean."

"And I can do without your offensive arrogance." Her whole body stiffened, she crossed the room to the stairs, then turned.

"Whatever you think of me isn't important, but for both our sakes let me do the talking tomorrow. That's all I ask of you—leave it to me. Good night."

Her footsteps died away, and from the perch behind him Cliff heard the macaw's derisive squawk. Walking to the window, he lit a cigarette. "Leave it to me." He was beginning to dislike that phrase, and he had no confidence in her. She was a badly frightened girl, trying to hide her incompetence beneath a cloak of assumed authority. Yet he had to depend on her.

And not on her alone—there was also this juggernaut they called Claribel. By some disastrous twist of fate two women had become the sole arbiters of his fortunes—he who had always shut out women from business affairs.

Never in his life had he felt so powerless to help himself, and suddenly the memory of Janet Norman's words came back to him. "Leave it to me," she had said.

"The devil of it is," he confided to the macaw, "there's nothing else I CAN do."

The sun was streaming in the window when he awoke. The air felt like spring, and Cliff jumped from bed, conscious that his nerves were singing with the excitement of knowing that the next few hours should decide his fate.

Once again the elaborate plumbing fulfilled its promise of hot water, and dressing quickly, he ran downstairs. Janet, they told him, was having breakfast in her room, so Cliff finished his coffee and warm rolls, then walked back to Claribel's office.

Except for the macaw, it was empty. Through the window he looked down over the village, where two boys were driving a herd of milk cows to pasture, and from every chimney smoke was rising. Peace and tranquility and a sense of quiet, unharried living pervaded the scene, and he felt a glow of pleasure as he looked down over the little checkerboard village and the lush green hills beyond.

"Good morning" Janet slipped through the doorway. "Claribel's up. She'll be here any minute."

"They are using synthetic," he confided to the macaw, "there's nothing that can be done."

"Rubber, Claribel."

"Oh, rubber." Her eyes went to Cliff. "That's what he wanted—and didn't get. Maybe you thought YOU could get around the old lady?"

"I'm not trying to get around you. You have as much to gain as anyone else. The United States will pay you more than you ever hoped for. They'll do all the work."

"They only want your permission to bring in American labor and American boats. They'll build the camps and roads; they'll take every bit of risk."

Claribel shrugged her shoulders. "If they need rubber that badly, why don't they use synthetic?"

"They are using synthetic. But there's not nearly enough, and they've found that for many things natural rubber is better. Most of all, they want a supply that can't ever be cut off from them again. You can make that possible, Claribel."

"The Authority on Authorities"

SINGLETON NOT USELESS

PRACTICALLY every good bridge book tells you that a singleton, or a blank suit, has value if in a side suit of the dummy, but is worthless in the declarer's hand. It is explained that declarer's trumps are already counted as trick-takers, and that placing any worth on the side suit shortage would be merely counting the same trump card or cards twice, whereas over in the dummy a side suit shortage offers a chance to use otherwise worthless trumps for additional tricks by ruffing. But a singleton can have value in the declarer's hand.

East explained later that, with three diamonds to the Q and two little clubs, he would not have opened the bidding with his hand. But the fact that he could not lose more than one club trick made him decide to bid. While that arrangement did not definitely increase his number of trick-takers, it did seem to cut down his losers.

Let's see how that worked out. South scored his club K and his A was ruffed by East. Three high trumps left the winning 10 out. East also was destined to lose exactly one trick in diamonds, so made his contract right on the play.

He was right, however, about that club singleton. If he had held two little clubs, he would have lost two tricks in the suit, so would have been down one in his game contract. That is, unless the clubs would have established well enough to give him three diamond discards—which might have been a tough job in timing the play.

Hayden happened to walk by a moment after the revision was made. He was shown the change—and didn't like it. A reporter standing by overheard him exclaim:

CONVENING of the new Congress brought a heavy task for Dr. George W. Calvert, capitol physician who ministers to the aches and pains of the lawmakers.

Dr. Calvert intends to give all 96 senators and 435 representatives a thorough going physical examination. As new members have established themselves in their offices, they have received polite notes asking them to call on the doctor.

After examining each thoroughly, Dr. Calvert gives the individual lawmaker a private talk. He speaks of blood pressure, heart condition and then, if the situation warrants it, he solemnly warns the lawmaker against getting overly excited in debate. In effect, he puts a limit on the screams.

THE COAL MINER'S PERIODIC CRY, "no contract, no work," is spreading to the dignified ranks of the nation's teachers, whose resignations in the face of increased living costs are alarming educational authorities.

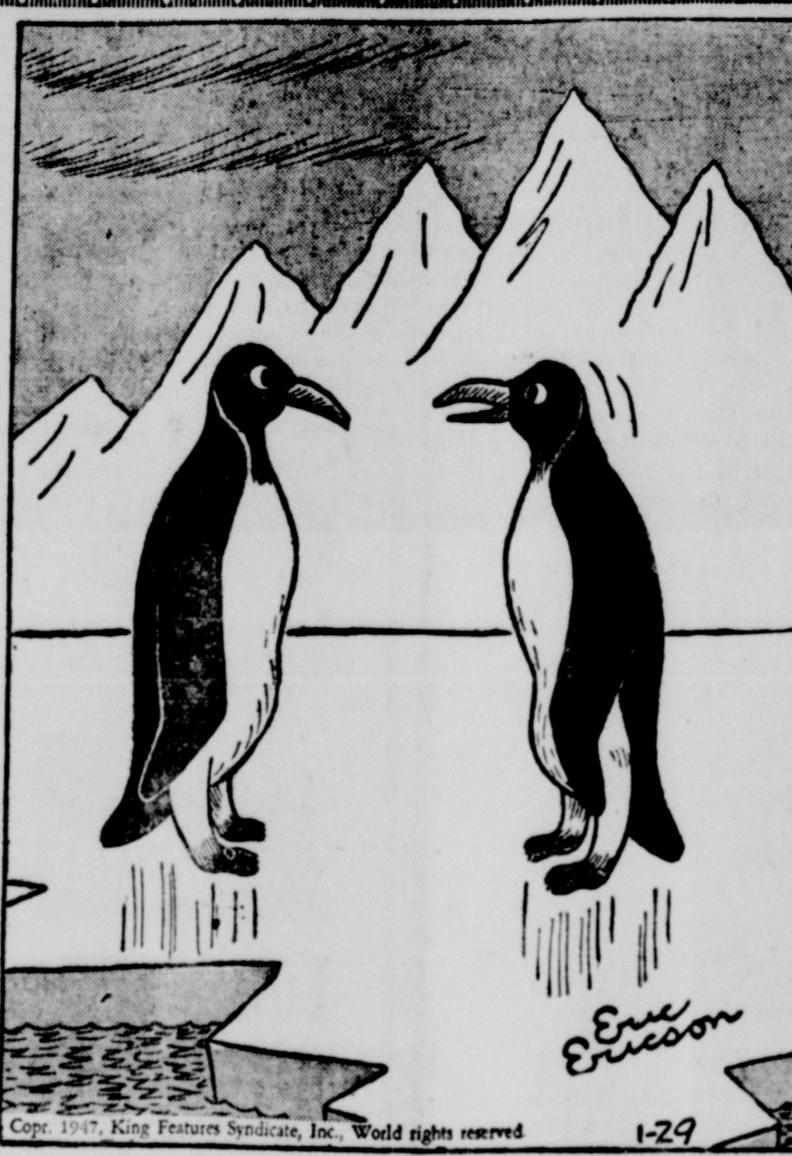

Many teachers, like other white-collar workers, are caught between fixed salaries and soaring prices. Their salaries, to begin with, are invariably below the levels for comparable professions.

So far, most teachers have refrained from striking for higher wages. But many have taken other jobs to make a living. Some have retained their teaching jobs and padded their salaries with outside work. In New York, one teacher became a part-time bartender.

The powerful National Education Association, however, has taken initial steps toward demanding better pay for its 775,000 members. It has even urged them to return their contracts next year unless more money is forthcoming.

SYNOPSIS

Cliff Bogard rises in capital by accepting the U. S. Rubber Division's dangerous assignment to open up virgin rubber plantations in New Dixie, South America, a kind of feudal colony which had been founded by Americans before the Civil War. When its present head, domineering old Claribel Florian, had refused Cliff an option, fearing it would stir up trouble with the Blacklanders, a group of rebellious natives, Washington had sent down attractive Janet Norman to straighten things out. Janet knew the territory, having been brought up there by her late father, beloved doctor of the community, whose death had occurred during a recent flood. Janet had her own reason for coming back, and it was sufficiently important to have caused her to forge the credentials she presented to Cliff. Her route to New Dixie from the coast, their plane is forced down near the jungle home of elderly Wade Carroll, hunter of wild animals. Wade discloses that no one knows the identity of the Blacklanders' new leader, whom the New Dixie vaqueros have sworn to capture, together with Vicente, his Lieutenant. Little, attractive, young native girl whom Wade adopted when her parents died, has known the latter since childhood. While Wade prepares horses, Vicente rides out of the jungle and warns Cliff to give up the rubber project. However, following a talk with Janet, he permits them to continue their journey, with the proviso they tell no one of having seen him. At Claribel's mansion a servant shows them to rooms.

CHAPTER EIGHT
CLIFF MOVED about the room, then once again the low, deep voice went on. "That partner of mine left a wife and daughter down in the Argentine, and if I don't put this job through they may not eat regularly. If I do put it through, I'll feel that I'm carrying out the thing he wanted to do and couldn't. I'm telling you all this, Miss Norman, so that you'll understand how important it is that we don't make any mistakes."

She sat watching him with her dark eyes, then as if his words had brought her to a sudden decision, she braced herself. "It's important to me too," she said, "I want to stay here."

The idea caught him by surprise. "Isn't your work finished when you get me started?"

"I want to stay here," she repeated, "and to do that I need a job with you."

"Do you know anything about rubber?"

She flushed. "Do you think they would have sent me if I didn't?"

He studied her while the color flooded her cheeks and the old resentment came back to her eyes. "You're stalling, Miss Norman," he said at last. "You don't know anything about rubber—I found that out on the plane coming down. And I don't believe you really care a darn about rubber. There's no place for a woman in this work, and I don't want people around me just to be decorative."

Her eyes flashed. "Why don't you say what you really mean, Mr. Bogard? You don't trust me."

Unperturbed by the angry outburst, he answered, "I don't trust you because I don't know what your game is. I like all the cards on the table, and for some reason you better let me handle the old battle-ax."

"That's just what I don't want! Please! Oh, please, keep out of it!"

He walked away. They were both getting edgy.

Upstairs a door slammed. He saw Janet start, and crushing out his cigarette, walked over to the macaw. The bird blinked at him solemnly from its high perch, then lowering its head, sidled gingerly toward him, and smiling, Cliff raised his hand. "Want the old top-knot scratched?"

"Young man," a voice rasped, "stop pestering that bird!"

Claribel had arrived.

Taller than most men, she would have commanded attention anywhere. An erect, deep-bosomed woman in the sixties, her square chin, high-arched nose, and wide-spaced cold blue eyes attested an enormous inner vitality. Everything about her was vigorous; she seemed to dominate even the huge room.

City And County Teachers Would Benefit Under Proposed Law

SALARY BOOSTS FOR MAJORITY ARE INDICATED

$2,000 Minimum Pay Bill Would Mean More Money For Most Teachers

Majority of the 211 school teachers in public schools in Circleville and Pickaway county receive a salary increase in the event of passage of a bill which is now before the Ohio legislature.

This was disclosed by Frank Fischer, superintendent of Circleville schools, and by George D. McDowell, superintendent of county schools. Both said that a few instructors receive more than $2,000 a year salary but that the majority are paid less than that sum.

They said there are 157 instructors in the 17 rural schools and 54 in the five city schools. The figures include both elementary and high schools.

A bill guaranteeing Ohio teachers a minimum $2,000 salary and fixing the state's share of the school foundation program at 92 million dollars a year was to be given its second reading and referred to the senate education committee today.

Sponsored by the Ohio Education association, the bill was introduced by Sens. Virgil Cramer (R-Toledo) and Albert Daniels (R-Greenfield) chairman of the senate finance committee, both long-time backers of school money measures.

The $14 million dollars provided in the bill for 1947-48 is some 71 million dollars more than the 113 million provided in regular and special sessions in 1945 and 1946.

The bill would also:

1.—Distribute the grants on a basis of enrollment rather than average daily attendance, which tends to increase subsidies;

2.—Increase the minimum guaranteed expenditures for each pupil in elementary schools from $67.50 to $109, and for high school students from $81 to $131;

3.—Increase the flat grant per pupil to all school districts, regardless of need, from $45 to $60 for grade school pupils and from $54 to $72 for high school students;

4.—Raise from three to four mills the minimum local tax levy required for school purposes before a district could qualify for state aid above the flat distribution;

5.—Lengthen the minimum school year from 32 to 36 weeks, and

6.—Encourage the consolidation of schools—elimination of the one-room "little red schoolhouses"—by limiting the state subsidy for such schools to $2,500-$3,000 for one-teacher schools and between $5,000-$6,000 for two-teacher schools.

Sponsors of the bill labeled the $2,000 minimum salary provision "one of the most important" in the bill.

"It is the only way," they stated in a release accompanying the bill, "that we can assure college students that teaching offers a career in Ohio."

They pointed out that last year only 582 elementary teachers were produced by all Ohio colleges and universities.

The same minimum was proposed also in a bill introduced in the house by Rep. Anna O'Neil (D-Summit), who proposed barring from state aid any districts not paying the minimum.

Another house bill to aid teachers was sponsored by Rep. Oakley C. Collins (R-Lawrence) who would permit teachers to retire at the end of 30 instead of 36 years.

Bath was the first English spa to become popular. Its natural springs had been used by the Romans. A fine Roman swimming pool is still there.

It is given to only a few to use their life span to benefit all generations to come after them. Such a gift was Thomas Alva Edison's: born a hundred years ago . . .

There is hardly a benefit we enjoy today, in relation to this nation's high standard of living which was not furthered in some way by Edison's productive life. We honor him at this time — who honored the land to which he was born.

Today we are serving Pickaway, Fairfield, Ross, Hocking, Vinton, Fayette and parts of Franklin County with modern electric service. Farms and farm homes with electrical appliances.
